BUSH BUSINESS FURNITURE DEBUTS NEW TELECOMMUTER / MICRO BUSINESS COLLECTIONS
Extends Transactional Commercial Casegoods Lines

JAMESTOWN, N.Y., June 15, 2009—Bush Industries, a leading global manufacturer of furniture for home and office, has launched three new commercial-grade casegoods collections created especially for teleworkers and micro businesses; and also has added extensions to its popular Quantum™ and Milano™ commercial casegoods lines.

“According to our research, an estimated 14 percent of Fortune 1000 companies have a telecommuting program,” said Devin McDonnell, Bush commercial brand manager. “And we’ve calculated that this trend has staying power—with nearly 1 million employees working from home within the next 24 months.”

Bush CEO Jim Sherbert added, “Our long-time experience in the less-than-100 office transaction market puts us in a unique position to offer knowledge-partner support to corporate or government entities considering—or currently supporting—a telework or remote-employee program. Bush’s value-priced, commercial-grade workstations, coupled with our one-of-a-kind delivery/installation/tracking mechanism will help companies get the most from their investment. And that’s an attractive proposition during these challenging economic times.”

Work@Home Program

All collections offered as part of Bush’s new Work@Home program meet ANSI/BIFMA standards and:

- Ergonomically-correct desk and drawer heights
- Inch-thick work surfaces
- Tested for sturdiness and durability
- 10-year or limited-lifetime warranty
- Compliant with state/federal health and safety guidelines.

New Collections:

- Enterprise (Contemporary styling. Finishes: Harvest Cherry and Mocha Cherry)

- Syndicate (Traditional styling. Finishes: Harvest Cherry and Mocha Cherry)

- Venture (Functional, small-space styling. Finish: Hansen Cherry)

In addition to the launch of the three new telework/micro business collections, Bush has also introduced line extensions to the Quantum and Milano commercial casegoods collections.
